

Joey Eschrich is the Program Manager at the Arizona State University's Center for Science and the Imagination, where he writes, edits, teaches, plans events, and builds collaborations with creative people and institutions. Joey earned his M.A. in Gender Studies and his B.A. in Film from Arizona State University; his research focused on gender and politics in popular culture. He has previously held teaching, research and administrative positions at a wide range of units at ASU, including the Office of University Initiatives, the Center for Film, Media, and Popular Culture, the Center for Solid State Electronics Research, and the School of Social Transformation.